Hey! P.U.P

(P.91)

Community I really appreciate y'all gift of supplies and goodies. y'all didn't have to do that for us, but you chose to anyway. Since I been in prison, I learned to value the small things people do for you. The reason why is because those small things will transform into big things. So thank you very much. Now as we all know we all have been blindsided by this deadly virus, and I want to be the first to say, specially being in here, that I am really scared. Scared because my mom has diabetes and azuma, I'm starting to go through self-hate again, because I am not there with my family, I need to be home with my family. Home is not a place you go for shelter, home is the people you have in your corner, your love ones are your shelter. It's so beautiful how parents are spending time with their kids and kids are bonding with their parents. My only thing is why can't people come together and love one another when there isn't a crisis. We been through alot, when nine eleven happen everyone supported each other, so I know we are going to get through this, so PUP please cherish your love ones at home, stay healthy. Believe it or not I fill empty without my education, like a part of me died. I hate not learning, it seems like every single time I am getting closer to helping myself, loving myself, or doing anything that involves with me, life... "she is" so unfair, whatever is going to make me happy she comes by and take it.

(P.92)

I pray and I pray, and sometimes I feel like God can't hear me, but I still have faith no matter what. It just that when have people that believes in me, the people I love the most, Life just come by and find way to destroy it. Is it true? That growing up with the people that comes into your life, means that eventually we grow apart. What if Life wants me to be alone? My whole life I been through war with myself, good v.s. evil, the battle of the two. However, PUP y'all really helped me out gave me alot of support since I been here. I really thank God that he allowed me to be in your life. Well P.U.P I wish y'all the best of wishes please stay healthy, and if there's anything I can do to help please let me know.

P.S. y'all can share my letter too.

Sincerely,
Ray Ray
